The Aga Khan Foundation invests in monitoring and evaluation throughout the job training process, in order to ensure the necessary adjustments to individual and group evolution in terms of relations, learning and adaptation to the workplace.

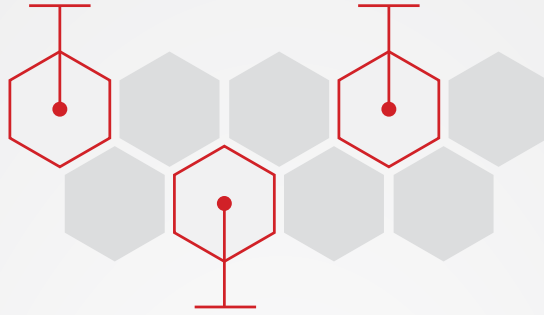

The focus is to support the development of the individual in all its dimensions: personal, social and professional. It is about guaranteeing quality, efficiency and effectiveness in the job market, greater income generation in a sustainable way, creating self-confidence, autonomy and skill sets that extend across various vocations.

We seek to ensure equal opportunities and gender equality at all levels, with a focus on reconciling work and family life. To this end, we promote the sharing of resources among various stakeholders and cultivate long-term partnerships in both the public and private sectors to ensure that local skills and talents are given their due value.
